

SEED SOURCES

FOR ORGANIC GROWERS

The Canadian Organic Grower presents our select list of seed companies that offer items of interest to our readers. Most of the companies sell organic seed, some is certified and some is not, and several companies carry only a line of organic seed in addition to their conventionally-grown seed. Be sure to check and see what seed is organic before you order, and if you're applying for certification, keep a record of the companies' certification details. A few companies in the list don't sell organic seed but offer unusual seedstock that is not available organically, such as nut trees.

'Cert. org.' refers to certified organic. 'OP' (open-pollinated) varieties, unlike hybrids, will breed true (provided adequate measures are taken to isolate from other varieties). All heirlooms and heritage varieties are open-pollinated.

Inclusion in this list does not imply a recommendation by Canadian Organic Growers and no claims are made as to comprehensiveness and accuracy. Information is based on material provided by the companies or from their websites.
